5 Reasons Why Prague is the Home of World-Class Coffee

Just a few years ago, this juxtaposition of words would have sounded ludicrous. But today, Prague is just a small step away from becoming a café superpower along the lines of London, Berlin, or New York. There are many reasons why Prague is unique for its coffee.

Keeping Pace with Global Trends

In recent years, Prague’s coffee scene has moved forward at a rapid pace. The impact of the third coffee wave has combined with the new young generation of professionals enthusiastically dedicated to coffee. Prepare yourself for high-quality Czech roasters, all the current trends, and a unique local coffee culture concept.

Friendly Prices

The intense competition and popularity of cafés with the locals has kept prices at a reasonable level – in Prague, you can get top-notch coffee for cheaper than in any other caffeine metropolis.

Architecture, Design, Tradition

Prague’s long history gives every café a unique context. Architecture, design, and art blend together in businesses both old and new. The variety of styles and the individuality of the various neighbourhoods are what makes Prague special.

Divine Desserts

Czech sweets are delicious and pair well with coffee. Cafés often make their own desserts in-house, or else have them made by a local producer. Cakes, pies, cream puffs – don’t even think about leaving before you try one.
No Rush and Friendly Service

Most Prague cafés offer a relaxed atmosphere with smiling faces behind the counter. Just sit and chat over a cup of coffee – no standing, no long lines, no crush at the bar.

Czech Café Etiquette

Seating and Ordering

Most cafés in Prague offer table service. Ordering at the counter is necessary only at espresso bars. In most places, you do not need to wait to be seated and can sit down at any available table. Guests are seated by staff only in large and busy cafés or more luxurious café/restaurants where in some cases you won’t be able to get a table without a reservation.

Coffee Nomenclature

At cafés serving premium coffee in Prague, they generally use the standard global names for various coffee drinks, so feel free to order as you normally would. In historical and traditional cafés around the city, espresso is often ordered as “small” (piccolo) and “large”, and when ordering, the staff will occasionally ask for your preference. A small espresso means a normal espresso; a large espresso is a not-very-good variation of an espresso lungo. You can get sugar and milk with your coffee in most places without any problem.

Paying

Most cafés in Prague accept credit cards. At espresso bars, you pay when you order; at cafés with table service, you pay before you leave.

Tipping

Cafés in Prague do not add tips onto the bill – it’s entirely up to you whether or not to tip. If you’re satisfied with the service, a 10% tip is standard.
Hospitality in both traditional and modern cafés in the Czech Republic is based on typical sweet treats, which Czechs love to eat with coffee. Here are some of the most famous – you’ll certainly come across them in Prague.

Bábovka (Bundt Cake, Crown Cake)
The most popular homemade dessert! Bábovka is usually made as a butter cake or a sponge cake. Ground nuts, cocoa, or chocolate bits are often added to the batter. Special variations include marble cake and “drunken” cake soaked with egg liqueur.

Kremrole (Cream Roll)
Sumptuous, puffy, crispy dough tubes filled with either whipped cream or meringue.

Větrník and Věneček (Creampuffs two ways)
Choux pastry like you’ve never had it. The větrník (“pinwheel”) is larger, is usually filled with two kinds of cream – vanilla and caramel – and topped with a caramel or chocolate glaze. Věnečeks (“wreaths”) are smaller and have a hole in the middle. They’re filled with custard cream and are glazed with sugar icing.

Laskonka
Czech macarons! They’re larger, oval and flat, and are filled with praline buttercream. It’s the Czechs’ greatest invention to go with cappuccino.
Rakvičky (Little Coffins)
A Czech speciality, hollow rectangles made of crisp yolk dough. They’re topped with whipped cream and their small size makes them an ideal accompaniment to coffee.

Pražský koláč (Prague “kolache”)
A rich dessert made with yeast dough sprinkled with crumb topping, filled with thick vanilla cream. You don’t see them often for sale, so if you do, snap it up!

Buchty (Buns)
A traditional baked sweet from Czech fairy tales. Buchty are small square buns of sweet yeast dough with a variety of fillings – tvaroh (quark cheese), povidla (plum butter), or mák (poppyseeds).

Linecké (Linzer Pastries)
Crispy butter cookies sandwiched together with redcurrant jam. The most common shapes are circles or hearts.

Moravské koláče (Moravian “kolache”)
Puffy circular buns made of yeast dough with various fillings (both inside and on top), plus a crumb topping; sizes vary from dainty to meal-sized. Definitely try the povidla (plum butter) and mák (poppyseed) fillings; the Czech Republic is the promised land of poppyseed enthusiasts.
The Beginnings of Prague Café Life

Prague isn’t known just for its pubs and beer – there’s also a Prague café phenomenon, which forms an indelible part of the city’s personality. Cafés have always been a gathering place, not only for coffee lovers, but also for students, artists, and politicians to discuss the latest events as well as literature, art, and life in general.

Nobody knows for sure exactly when coffee arrived in the Czech lands. Coffee made its way to Europe from North Africa and Turkey via Venetian merchants. After coffee houses began making their appearances in major European ports, Prague was naturally next in line.

The first Prague coffee purveyor was an Armenian by the name of Deodatus Damayan Damascenus. At first, he sold coffee right on the streets of the city, a coffee table slung over his shoulder, a turban on his head balancing a tray, and on it coffee brewed in a cezve/ibrik. In 1711, Damayan established the first Prague café below the Mostecká Tower on the Little Quarter side of Charles Bridge – at the time the only bridge and therefore the most important thoroughfare in Prague. The café was located in the beautiful Renaissance building U Tří pštrosů (At the Three Ostriches), nowadays a luxury hotel and restaurant.

The Golden Age

The greatest developments in coffee culture occurred during the 19th century. Towards the turn of the 20th century, coffee brewing habits began to heat up on a grand scale. Coffee roasting companies were established and even more cafés opened. The number grew not only in the city centre, but also farther out towards the edges of the city. In the heart of the city, there were at least 120 establishments. The golden age of cafés had arrived, and they became important hubs of cultural life.

The interwar period in Czechoslovakia was a time of prosperity; the country had a visionary president, a strong economy, and an educated and ambitious middle class. During this time, Prague changed from a sleepy provincial city of the Austrian monarchy to the lively capital of the young republic in which representatives of modern intellectual and artistic spheres mingled – and cafés here played an irreplaceable role.

Famous Historical Cafés

Among these are the Café Slavia in the Lažanský Palace, which opened in 1884 across the street from the National Theatre. Over time, this made it a perfect meeting point for well-known cultural figures, such as composer Antonín Dvořák, writer Karel Čapek and his brother Josef, known primarily as an artist, as well as poets Jaroslav Seifert (a Nobel laureate) and Vítězslav Nezval. During the Communist era, Slavia was also a favorite haunt of Prague dissidents including Václav Havel, who always sat to the side with a view of Prague Castle and watched guests and life on the street. From the windows of the café, you can take in one of the most beautiful views of Prague; the film director Miloš Forman makes a point of visiting Slavia every time he's in Prague.

Not far away, overlooking Národní Street from its second floor perch, is one of the oldest cafés in Prague, Café Louvre. It began operating in 1902; the German philosophical circle met here regularly, including law students Max Brod and Franz Kafka. At the time of his professorship in Prague, Albert Einstein was a regular guest on Tuesday evenings in the salon.
The Art Nouveau Hotel Paříž drew Czech surrealists to its café. Artists Jindřich Štyrský and Marie Čermínová, a.k.a. Toyen, met here with poets André Breton and Paul Éluard. (The hotel itself became the fictional backdrop for Bohumil Hrabal’s novel I Served The King of England – an brilliant work describing the dramatic twists and turns of 20th century Czech history in an engaging and entertaining manner.)

Decline and Renaissance

Café life in Prague thrived until 1948, when the rug was pulled out from under it. The postwar communist regime considered cafés to be elitist and decadent, and many were closed – some even disappearing from the map forever. In the 1960s, however, cafés slowly resumed operations, often connected with patisseries.

Along with the loss of cafés, a parallel decline of coffee (and more broadly, of gastronomic) culture took place, reaching its nadir at the end of the communist regime in 1989. Even in the 1990s, the usual café standard was the infamous “turek” – coarsely ground low quality coffee with hot water poured over without a filter – or instant coffee. The new millennium, however, brought a second wind to Prague cafés. Along with the new coffee culture, brought here from abroad by a handful of enthusiasts, came also a revival of cafés as spaces for cultural exchange. In addition to a plethora of espresso bars and neighbourhood cafés, Prague today even has theatre, literary, and alternative/punk cafés – and more are opening all the time. Our guide will help you navigate the scene.

Good coffee in an unexpected location. If you find yourself in the vicinity of the Holešovice Market, make a point to stop here for coffee. Alza Café is a training espresso bar for Doubleshot roaster. Don’t be alarmed – it’s located smack in the middle of a huge electronics store. It sounds odd, but paradoxically, the quality of the coffee here is excellent and compares favourably with cafés in the city centre. They’ve also got a good selection of open-faced sandwiches and pastries from their own bakery. The interior aside, it’s a reliable place to stop if you’re just interested in good coffee.

Eska

Mon–Fri 11.30am–3pm, 5.30pm–11.30pm,

+420 731 140 884
http://eska.ambi.cz

The café on the ground floor belongs to the eponymous restaurant and bakery which share common space on the premises of Forum Karlín. Just like the restaurant, which takes its inspiration from Nordic cuisine, the café takes an alternative approach to both preparation and the use of ingredients. If you head to Eska, don’t miss their experimental drinks and enjoy something from the bakery, such as flaky croissants, homemade coffee cake, and open-faced sandwiches. During the winter, seating in the café is limited, but in the summer, Eska has extensive outdoor seating.
A small espresso bar with choice coffees from their own roaster. This miniature standing-only coffee bar strikes a balance between a friendly atmosphere and a professional approach to making coffee. We recommend accompanying your coffee with a pastry from the Simply Good bakery on the other side of the square.

Note: No restrooms.
The opening of this café in Prague a few years ago kicked off the third coffee wave in Prague and the transformation of Karlin into a modern, trendy district. At Šálek, as the locals call it, you’ll find excellent premium coffee from the Doubleshot roaster, warm food throughout the day, and desserts from their own bakery. Don’t miss their seasonal espressos or their tasting flights of filter coffee. Šálek is very busy during peak periods, so don’t be discouraged if you have to wait a bit to be served. During the warmer months, you can take advantage of their outdoor seating area right on the street.
Alongside Paris, Berlin and Vienna, European cultural history was also made in Prague’s cafés. While only a few of these establishments have weathered all storms and remained in service to this day, other cafés have adopted the classical look and style. These are magical spots where history, culture, and unique architecture come together. We recommend them if you prefer to see living, breathing places rather than museums. Soak up Prague’s atmosphere and immerse yourself in its history over a cup of coffee.
Café Savoy

Vítězná 5, Prague 5 – Malá Strana

A jewel for all fans of design and architecture. The House of the Black Madonna, designed by architect Josef Gočár and built between 1911 and 1912, is an iconic work of Czech Cubism. The café, which was out of service for decades, underwent a thorough, faithful reconstruction in the 1990s. In addition to the enchanting interior, we recommend visiting the museum of Cubism in the same building. One of the café’s sweet specialities is their custard-filled choux pastry “věneček”; in a charming nod to Cubism, the pastry is executed here as a square rather than the usual circle.
One of the most beautiful cafés in Prague. If you can overlook its openly touristy focus, you’ll be rewarded with a splendid Art Nouveau interior and a respectable selection of cakes. The café is located on the ground floor of the Municipal House, one of the most important Art Nouveau monuments in Prague. Many famous Czech artists and sculptors contributed to the building’s unique décor; a guided tour is highly recommended.

Another of the large Prague cafés with a history reaching back to the very end of the 19th century. The café has undergone many operational, cultural, and political changes. During the post-1968 period, it was a favourite meeting place for Czech dissidents, including President Václav Havel. The elegant café, with a seating capacity of 500, serves warm meals and breakfast all day long. Definitely stop here at least for a glass of wine – the view of the Vltava River and Prague Castle from the café’s windows is one of the most beautiful in the city.

A large Prague café with roots going back to the turn of the 20th century. Louvre was one of the traditional Czech cafés through whose doors passed many famous authors and artists. The café’s current appearance is rooted in a long tradition. Louvre serves warm meals all day and is a favourite place for business meetings – it’s often full even at breakfast and lunch. The locals come here in the evenings for a glass of wine.
Prague cafés often function as active cultural centres. A wide spectrum of society, including students, the older generation, and artists, come to them for art, entertainment, and education. We present a small selection of the most interesting cafés – the embodiment of the bohemian energy and intellectual restlessness of contemporary Prague.

A popular project by young urban revivalists Lukáš Žďárský and Jakub Zajíc, who bring unique buildings and spaces back to life. Here in Smíchov, they’ve breathed new life into an old carpentry workshop, transforming it into a busy café, full practically from the day it opened. The space blends the worlds of premium coffee with art and architecture – here you’ll also find a gallery and artists’ atelier. The well-lit space of the former workshop and charming courtyard provide the perfect retreat from an otherwise very busy neighbourhood. Homemade sweets, soups, and premium-quality coffee from Czech roasters.

If you’re interested in Žďárský and Zajíc’s other projects, we recommend you visit their recently opened VNITROBLOCK (Facebook @vnitroblock), part of which is the SIGNATURE store and café (page 56) or the Radlická Kulturní Sportovna (kulturnisportovna.cz).

This punky-looking spot is run by successful Czech author Petra Hůlová as a cafeteria and internet café. We’re in Vršovice, so expect a post-modern mix of contemporary alternative Berlin with a hint of the 1990s. In addition to an ongoing series of literary, music and art events, they serve breakfast and simple daily dishes at reasonable prices.
This café stood at the forefront of the current interest in the Prague neighbourhood of Vršovice – Krymská Street, in particular, has become the city’s hotspot of independent culture. A rich cultural program and a 1970s retro interior attract a diverse daily clientele. The café also features a gallery and music club in the lower section. In addition to coffee, they offer beer, wine, and a wide selection of whiskies and rums.

Holešovice has undergone an upswing in recent years and is turning into another artistic centre in Prague, with a number of unique projects in the works. Signature Store & Cafe is part of the larger Vnitroblock project, which has revived an old local industrial building. In one city block, you’ll find fashion and design side by side with the Sector dance studio and the PidiKino. And of course good coffee. An ideal place if you’d like to experience the new artistic Prague up close.

Vnitroblock is the third project from the drawing boards of Lukáš Žďárský and Jakub Zajíc. We also recommend visiting Kavárna co hledá jméno (page 51) and Radlická kulturní sportovna (kulturnisportovna.cz).
